Lodge's Tribute

Not to W. W.

Here is a bit of biography that is of peculiar interest in these days of the attempted dominancy of Messrs. Lodge, Knox, et al:

"When the war drew to a close, it was he who began alone the task of making peace. He had nearly completed the work when his colleagues appeared in Paris, and the incantations words broke the web so carefully spun."

Finally, boldly disregarding the instructions of Congress, he emerged from all complications with a triumphant peace.

Is this a tribute to Woodrow Wilson? Looks like it, doesn't it? Well, it isn't! It is a portion of a satiric delivered by Senator Lodge to the memory of Benjamin Franklin for the part that the noble old patriot played in winding up the Revolutionary War.

There are those who are so keenly appreciative of humor as to consider this a pretty good, though altogether unexcusable, joke played by Senator Lodge upon himself and his fault-finding colleagues.

Why This Postmaster Quit

Postmaster J. B. Clark, of Wisconsin, Maine, has quit his job. There isn't much news to this mere fact, says the Benton Harbor, Michigan, Palladium...

"At the time I took the office," says Postmaster Clark, "it was considered a political plum, and it was a good job, but today it is a job that the more a man knows about it the less he would want, for it has been bedeviled for the past two years, until today it is a bank, an express office, a postoffice and a freight shed, all combined, with the same number of clerks, and the same compensation of old, when the office had 90 per cent less responsibility, 50 per cent less work, and the cost of living was 60 per cent less."

"I have often thought that it was a great pity that a man with brains enough to conceive the central accounting system didn't have enough left over to regulate the compensation of the postmaster and clerks in central accounting offices."

"I have written letters enough to Washington in the past six months to paper the White House, but they have made no impression on the great heads of the postoffice department. So I have come to the conclusion that the only relief is in death or resignation, and I prefer to resign, as my disposition at present is not good enough to take into the 'great beyond.'"

"We poor devils in the postal service have one consolation: We have been saving Uncle Sam a bunch of money by being patriotic, and working for starvation wages so that he might pay the baggage masters on the railroads, and the common bumpers in the shipyards, many of whom are not worth 25 per cent of any spot of place, and are under no responsibility whatever, wages ranging from $25 to $30 per week."

"When postoffices were distributed in Lincoln county, they were wiser, broader, and all took root and flourished, so that this office, under the central accounting system, fell heir to 28 offices, many more than many of the best class offices have in other counties with a large force of clerical assistance."

"My first assistant has been in the service at this office for thirteen years, and is drawing just living wages."

"My second assistant, in connection with her other duties in the office, has handled the war and thrift stamp business for the past year, including the district office sales. This amounted to over $100,000, and she is allowed by the department the enormous sum of $21.33 per month, and board is ranging at present from $6 per week up. I am making her salary attractive enough from my own pocket to keep her, because she is a very competent and conscientious clerk. Do you wonder that I have turned gray and lost my disposition?"

"Girls who have been working for McAdoo at the railroad office, who are no more competent or smarter than my clerks, are pulling down from $90 to $170 per month, and that is the very thing that is making clerks in the postal department disatisfied with their jobs. Who wonders that I long for the tall timber and the voice of the chipmunk again?"

Oliver Peaker was in from his ranch, near White Oaks, this week. He says range condition were seldom better than at present, and live stock are doing fine. The thoroughbred stock, which he purchased in Colfax county in April, are beautiful specimens. He imported a car load of two-year olds, paying from $250 to $475 a head, and he claims there is nothing finer in the county.

Washed Eggs Will Not Stand Up In Storage

Time and money are lost in washing eggs, according to Special Information Service No. 51, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture to farmers and country handlers of eggs.

Approximately 5,016,000 dozen eggs spoil every year in cold storage, because clean eggs have been allowed to get wet, or dirty eggs have been washed, according to specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. From 17 to 22 per cent of washed eggs become worthless in storage, whereas only 4 to 8 per cent of dirty eggs stored unwashed spoil, shown by careful investigations made of large quantities of stored eggs.

This enormous loss of eggs in storage can largely be prevented if producers and egg handlers, especially during March, April and May, will refrain from washing eggs destined for storage, and take pains to reduce the number of dirty eggs by providing plenty of clean sheltered nests for their hens. Many eggs spoil in storage, because they have been exposed to dew, rain, and mud, in outside nests and in nest boxes.
